

Geo. Osmus New Lenox Shoots Self

George Osmus, aged 61 years, well known New Lenox man, committed suicide by shooting himself last Saturday morning.

Mr. Osmus left home about 9 o'clock saying he was going to Joliet. When he failed to return home at noon, a search for him was begun, and his son, George Jr., found his car parked on the north side of the Lincoln highway about half a mile west of New Lenox. A short distance further on the Rock Island right-of-way, he found the body of his father with a .32 caliber revolver lying beside him. He had fired a shot thru his right temple.

The automobile Mr. Osmus had started out in belonged to his son George. The revolver, it was later learned belonged to another son, Walter, who is a deputy sheriff.

The inquest was held Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the New Lenox State Bank by Will County Coroner, Dr. E. A. Kingston. The coroner's jury returned a verdict of death with suicidal intent. Death had been instantaneous. No motive for the act was given.

Funeral services were held from the Fred C. Dames Funeral Home in Joliet Monday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. John Dingle, pastor of the New Lenox M. E. church officiated. Burial was made in the Maplewood cemetery in New Lenox. The pall bearers were: Chas. Pease, Wm. Sayers, Norton Deal, Peter Kestle, Chas. Nelson and Wm. Hafka.

Mr. Osmus is survived by his wife, three sons, Walter, Arthur and George Jr., one daughter, Mrs. Chas. Wilson of Detroit, Michigan; six grandchildren; two brothers, August of New Lenox and Chas. of Joliet.

Mr. Osmus was born on the old Osmus homestead where his brother August now lives. He was a farmer until nine years ago when he moved to New Lenox where he conducted a general store and gas station.

Two weeks' delay in the murder trial of Frank Schanda, 29 years old, ex-convict of Chicago, charged with slaying an aged Frankfort oil station attendant in a holdup January 10, was granted Monday by Judge Frank L. Hooper in Will County.

Joseph Lustfield, attorney for Schanda, obtained continuance of the case on a plea that he was unable to present the defense case at this time because of pressing engagements in court at Chicago. Hjalmar Rehn, state's attorney, was prepared to try the case when it came up Monday afternoon and a panel of jurors also waited.

The first move of the defense will be an effort to have the case tried before either Judge Frederick A. Hill or Judge Arthur W. De Selm, it was indicated Monday when a petition for a change of venue from Judge Hooper was filed by Lustfield. The petition sets forth the usual contention that the defendant feels the presiding judge is prejudiced against him.

Judge Hooper did not act on the petition Monday, but set the case for 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, May 31. The change of venue will then be the first consideration before the trial can proceed.

Schanda, charged with fatally shooting William Schmook, 56, the station attendant, has been identified as the slayer by Miss Elizabeth McMullen, 18, daughter of the station owner and a witness to the crime. Schmook was shot when he tried to resist two bandits.

In addition to the murder indictment, Schanda faces eight indictments for robberies in and around Joliet, all returned by the last grand jury.

Cook County Commissioners Will Inspect Southwest Right of Way Thru Orland Friday

The Cook County Highway Commissioners are going to meet with the officials of Orland township and of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce this Friday afternoon and evening relative to the Southwest Highway thru Orland Park.

The Commissioners are to start looking over the Southwest Highway at Chicago Ridge and will proceed from there on to Orland Park, arriving here about 3:30 P. M. From Orland Park they will go along the proposed route thru Orland southwardly to Alpine and then connect with the Wolf Road and the Southwest Highway now built up to Marley in Will County.

A few weeks ago the village board of Orland Park voted on a proposed route of the Southwest highway from the grade separation bridge thru the Forest Preserve back of the school, thence southwardly to the south end of the village limits, but it is understood that this route may be changed and that the route may go straight south from the grade separation bridge thru Orland Park and thence parallel the Wabash railroad to Alpine. If this route is taken it will mean that the county or state will have to buy the Zerbs, Kruspe, Loebe and Austin properties for the right of way thru the village.

At the close of the tour of inspection over the proposed routes, a big Southwest Highway road meeting will be held in the school auditorium of the Orland Park high school to which every road booster for miles around is urged to come. The Commissioners will attend this meeting and many important matters pertaining to the Southwest highway will be discussed and acted on.

The Path To Success

The "Path to Success", from the financial standpoint is clearly defined. But precaution is necessary. If you would follow it straight and true, you must be guided by men who know its many tempting crossroads, men whose experience as bankers have taught them that conservatism in money matters is the only SAFE means of making progress.

This Bank's officers are qualified to serve you in that capacity! And they gladly welcome your call for Advice on Investments, Savings or any problem you have concerning Money and Your Future.

The disabled ex-service men in the government hospitals are paid for making the poppies and they cost the local post five cents apiece. Therefore, only money over and above that amount goes for the local relief. The public may pay any thing they like for the poppies but it is hoped that they keep the above in mind.

Last year the local post bought one thousand poppies of which 850 were sold in the above mentioned communities bringing in a total of $105.98. The poppies cost the post $50 leaving a balance for the relief of $55.98. This fund has been used for the relief of the needy ex-service men and their families thruout the past winter for purchases of coal and food. It has indeed been a life saver in more than one case.

Last year Worth made the highest record in the amount of money turned in for poppies. The communities and the number of poppies and the amount turned in are as follows:

Worth sold 290 poppies for $42.81
Orland Pk. sold 315 poppies 37.01
Palos sold 150 poppies for 14.58
Oak Lawn sold 60 poppies for 7.38
Chicago Ridge sold 35 poppies for 4.20.

It is hoped that the Post will be able to surpass last year's poppies day record as the need for relief is greater this year than last. Let us have every one wearing a poppy this year. When you are solicited by the poppy saleslady please do your part.

CHAPTER I

The Fugitive and the Pocket Eye.

That dam on the Racquette so increased the prosperity and size of the small settlements on either shore of the river that a bridge became necessary. It was built. The two communities separated by flowing water had long been at war with each other. The bridge drew them together into one village. Their petty jealousies vanished. It was unregenerate Colonel Spenslow, the miller and local Republican boss, who gave the new place its truthful and euphonious name. He called it Amity Dam, thus visiting on its inhabitants a certain curious penalty for the sins of their fathers. They were soon known as Amity Dammers.

Long after that the little village was the home of a far-famed mystery out of which came a murderer convicted in the face of unexampled difficulties and against the testimony of three eye-witnesses. It was, moreover, for a time the home of a number of remarkable characters related to the mystery. One of them was the boy Shad Morryson whose courage and shrewd intuition served the state and put him on the road to fortune.

Shad was discovered on a bright June day in 1896. He lay asleep on a bed of moss under a group of pine trees. Two fishermen who had come ashore for luncheon found him. Nobody knew exactly when he was born—a matter of slight importance. Shad's life began the day he was discovered. It is likely that he had been eating and drinking a little more than sixteen years.

The fishermen came upon him suddenly. He lay sprawled on his back with an ancient, long-barreled, muzzle-loading shotgun at his side. He was a pale thin lad in ragged clothing. Both big toes protruded from holes in his boots. The fishermen aroused him. He sat up and rubbed his eyes and stared in confusion at the strangers looking down at him. The odor of frying bacon came to his nostrils. Kindly faces were before him.

"I guess I must be dead," he whispered.

They saw to the heart of the boy when he asked from the lifting cloud of his slumber:

"Is God here?"

One of the men put his hand on the boy's shoulder and gave him a gentle shake as he said:

"Wake up, young man. You're still dreaming. You're not dead yet. Come. Lunch is 'most ready."

Still it was a fact that the old Shad Morryson, known to a few people in the forest township of Blair, was dead, that the water at his feet was in effect the River Jordan. Moreover, it would seem that God was really there.

"Well, I kind o' expected to be dead when I woke up," said the boy as he arose. "If I ain't, I'm glad of it. I want to live."

What a pitiful look of drooping discouragement and supplication was in the figure of the lad as he arose!

"What's the matter? Are ye lost?" one of the strangers asked.

"Run away from home."

"What's your name and where do you live?"

"Don't dast tell ye."

"Are you hungry?"

"Starvin'. Ain't had nothin' to eat for days but one patridge an' a chipmuck."

"Well, you're in luck! Here's sandwiches and bacon and eggs and fish. The fish are frying."

As he spoke the fisherman was undoing packages of food from the pack basket.

The boy trembled with eagerness as he saw it. His face quivered.

"Oh, mister, can I have a sandwich now?" he asked.

"You bet. Take two."

The boy devoured them. He ate like a hungry dog just returned from the chase.

"I feel better already," said the boy. "I'll go an' wash. I'm dirty. I ain't fit to eat with nobody, not even myself."

He hurriedly undressed on the river bank. The fishermen observed that the back of his shirt was slashed and bloody, the skin of his back ridged, red and swollen.

"My G—d, boy! What has happened to your back?" one of the men inquired.

"Does it look bad?" the boy asked.

"Bad! I should think that some one had used it for a chopping block."

"Well, they did. My dad gits mad awful easy when he's drunk. He ain't always so mean. I guess I'm purty mean myself. I don't take no interest in the work. What's the use? It don't do no good. He got home an' ketches me fishin' when I should 'a' been hoein' potatoes."

Shad swam around a moment, came out of the water, dressed himself hurriedly and sat down with his new friends. They were afraid he would eat too much and compelled him to stop before his appetite was appeased.

"I want to pay ye for what I et," said the boy.

"How can you pay us for all that food?"

"I guess I can pay ye. I've got five dollars. I earned it workin' out. It was hid in the clock. I stole it when I run away."

"We don't want your money, but we rather like your company."

"I ain't got nothin' else but a top an' some brass wheels that come out of an old clock, an' four lead bullets, an' three fish-hooks stuck in a cork, an' a glass eye that my uncle give me the day he died."

Shad took the trinkets out of his trousers pocket as he spoke, with a fond look at them.

The men laughed, saying: "No, we only want to get better acquainted with you. You must come to our camp with us. Perhaps we can help you."

That night he went with the fishermen to their camp at High falls. Three days later the party moved to Lost lake where they put up in the log cabin camp of the famous guide, Philo Scott, familiarly known as Phide.

Now, one of these sportsmen was slim and a bit undersized. He gave the boy a respectable suit of clothes and shoes and stockings, a cap, a flannel shirt, with collar attached, and a necktie. All these fitted fairly well. Shad came out of the camp in which his benefactor was lodging a new human being, his face clean, his hair trimmed and combed and brushed. Those who saw him were astonished.

Shad was well put up, as they used to say in the north country. In spite of his leanness and lankness he was now good to look on. The shapely outlines of his head and face were pleasing. The expression of his face was cheerful. He was like a scrawny, ill-fed colt of a promising size and pattern.

"I Guess I Must Be Dead," He Whispered.

The boy took the glass eye from his pocket and held it in the light of the lamp and looked at it.

"My uncle was an awful good man," said Shad. "He told me that this eye would help me to remember that God is a watchin' of me. It's a smart o' eye. It can see a long ways ahead, an' it can tell when good luck is comin'."

Phide Scott blew his whistle. Supper was ready. The old guide came in with a platter of fried bacon and a plate of griddle cakes steaming hot.

"Mr. Scott, this is a boy we found asleep on the shore of the river," said one of the fishermen. "He was about starved."

The old guide shook the boy's hand and asked:

"Be you Bat Morryson's boy that's run away?"

Shad was frightened by this unexpected query. His face changed color. He shook his head and stammered:

"If—I if I was I—I'd be 'shamed to tell ye."

"His boy has stole some money an' run away," the guide went on. "I was over to Wanakeny today an' Bat was there. He's run on the tracks o' the boy an' is searchin' the woods. Be comin' through here in the mornin'!"

Then one of the fishermen let go as follows:

"We don't know whom this boy belongs to. If it's Bat Morryson, I want to tell you that Bat can't have him any more. I'd as soon trust a boy in a cage with a tiger."

"Bat Morryson is a tough ol' wildcat of a man," said the guide. "Had a good woman an' broke her heart. Died years ago. He's drunk half the time. Don't git into no fight with him. He bites like a dog. He'd just as soon take an ear off ye as not."

"I know how to handle that kind of a cur," said the sport, a big powerful man. "Don't worry."

After supper these gentlemen took the boy to their sleeping camp. One of them cut off a piece of an old moth-eaten buffalo robe that lay on the floor. He trimmed and shaped it neatly with a pair of scissors. Soon he took the measure of Shad's upper lip.

"I'm making a mustache for you," the man said.

Some liquid glue was applied to the skin side of the mustache. Soon it was fast to Shad's lip. It made a surprising change in the look of the lad.

"Nobody would know you," said one of the men. "It's put ten years on your head. We have a plan for you. Remember you're a man now. You will get a good rest tonight and a good breakfast in the morning. Then you'll take the trail to Bog lake. My camp is there. I'll give you a note to the guide in charge. He will show you across country to the railroad. If you should meet your father, he wouldn't know you. We're going to stake you with twenty dollars. Take a train going west for some point beyond the woods. You'll get a job somewhere. I hope you'll make your fortune. Here is my card. Write me now and then and let me know how you're getting along."

The card bore the name and address of the steel magnate:

"Edmund C. Converse,

Shad put the money and card in his trousers pocket with great care.

"I'm much obliged," he said. "I'm kind o' scairt to have so much money. Hope I don't git robbed."

"Don't show it to anybody or let anybody know that you've got it. Keep your small money in one pocket an' your big money in the other, and don't have much to say to strangers."

The boy's heart was full, and these friendly interested men encouraged him to open it.

They were interrupted by Phide Scott, who entered, closing the door behind him. He spoke in a whisper.

"Bat Morryson is over to the cook house. Just come in with a lantern from Dead Creek doe."

Mr. Converse turned to the boy and said:

"You sit right over there out of the light and don't say a word whatever happens. You needn't be scared. I'm going to take care of you."

Turning to the guide he added: "I want to hire your camp for twenty-four hours. I'll give you a dollar an hour for that period. I want to be the boss here for just twenty-four hours. What has Morryson got to say?"

"He wants to spend the night here."

"Tell him you've rented the camp an' he'll have to see me."

"Shall I bring him here?"

"Bring him here but say nothing about the boy."

The guide vanished, returning presently with Bat Morryson—a hairy, powerful Cyclops of the foothills. His one eye was red, his face flushed. He had been drinking but was not drunk.

"What do you want?" Converse asked bluntly.

"I'm lookin' for my boy Shad who run away an' is somewhere in this part o' the woods."

Converse stopped him.

"Why did he run away? Couldn't you make him happy at home?"

"I tried to."

"No, you didn't. I know all about you. You abused his mother. When she died you married a strumpet who abuses your children. You go off and get drunk and spend about all you can earn while Shad plants and hoes the potatoes and corn. You come home and get mad and beat him until his back bleeds. I saw the lad. He was a mile or so below High falls on the river bank. I saw his wounds, too. D—n you, Bat Morryson, you care for nothing but that greedy, dirty, hog's belly of yours!"

Bat Morryson sat leaning forward on his elbows, looking at the man who thus addressed him, his brow deeply furrowed. His attitude was that of a great cat ready to spring. He knew that he was in the presence of his master. No one had ever talked to him like that. No one had ever dared to.

He rose from his chair with a serious look on his face. He turned to the old guide, saying:

"Give me a bite to eat an' I'll go to bed."

"Not here," said Converse. "Not on your life. This is my camp. I don't want you anywhere near me. You pike off and take your chances just as the boy has done. There's a camp at High falls."

"That's fifteen mile from here, an' it looks like rain," the rufian muttered.

"Good! I wish it was twenty and that it would rain hard enough to wash your dirty soul. For once in your life you're going to do some work."

Sauce for the Gander

There was a tired business man, a member of that busy clan that shields itself from prying eye behind that good old alibi.

He rested in his office chair and ducked a lot of toil and care, and smoked cigars in sweet content and thus his busy hours were spent.

In conference, Came anxious strangers by the score to camp outside his office door, and angrily they went their way for he was busy all the day.

In conference, And so he died and at the gate an angel bade him stand and wait, and said to him with frowning brow, "St. Peter's mighty busy now."

I. Jacob Departs for Canaan (31:11-21).

The time had come for Jacob to go back to his kindred in the Land of Canaan. This he did according to the Lord's instruction to him (v. 13). Though going forward under divine direction, his Jacob nature caused him to take clandestine leave of Laban. When Laban realized the situation, he went in hot pursuit of him, but God appeared unto him in a dream and warned him against any act of violence toward Jacob. They formed a compact and Laban returned home.

II. Jacob's Experience on the Way (ch. 32).

Laban's return freed Jacob from the enemy who was pursuing him, but he faced a more formidable enemy in the person of Esau from whose wrath he had fled twenty years before.

1. Jacob meeting the angels (vv. 1-8). Two camps of angels met him to give him the assurance that God would be with him according to promise. Notwithstanding this, Jacob continued to scheme. He sent a deputation before him with a message of good cheer to Esau.

2. Jacob praying (vv. 9-12). Esau made no reply to Jacob's message, but went forward with an army of four hundred strong to meet Jacob. In his distress, Jacob cast himself upon God in prayer, short, direct, and earnest.

a. He reminded God of his command issued for his return and also of the covenant promise (Gen. 31:3).

b. He pleaded God's promise as to his personal safety (v. 9, cf. Gen. 28:13-15, 31:33). In praying to God we should definitely plead his promises in his Word on the ground of covenant relationship in Christ.

c. He confesses his unworthiness (v. 10). In this is shown the proper spirit of humility.

d. He presents definite petitions (v. 11). He laid before the Lord the definite request to be delivered from the wrath of Esau.

3. The angel of the Lord wrestling with Jacob (vv. 24-32, cf. Hos. 12:3, 4).

In God's school of discipline Jacob was making some improvement, but he was still under the sway of self-will and self-trust. Though he had laid the matter definitely before the Lord, he thought that his scheming would render God some assistance. Accordingly, he sent presents ahead to appease the anger of Esau. While on this journey a man met him and wrestled with him, but Jacob knew not who he was. He exerted every ounce of strength in what he thought was the struggle for his very life. The morning was approaching and still the wrestlers continued, Jacob not knowing that it was the Lord manifest in human form. He did not dare enter the promised land under the control of his self-sufficiency. His self-will must be broken—his Jacob nature must be changed. He was humbled by the dislocation of his thigh. When thus humbled, he quit wrestling and clung to God.

4. Jacob gets a new name (v. 28). He was no longer Jacob the "supplanter," but Israel, a "prince with God." Jacob had an experience at the Jabbok which wrought a mighty change in him. His new name was given him after he had a new nature. Jacob came to realize that he had been struggling with God, for he called the place "Peniel," which means "face to face with God." Jacob wrestled most of the night with God, but it was only when he yielded and laid hold of God that he got the blessing.

III. Jacob Meets Esau (33:1-11).

God had evident wrought with Esau for when Jacob approached him the sting of bitterness was gone. It was not Jacob's scheming that removed Esau's anger, but the action of God upon his heart. At Jabbok, Jacob got right with God, so when he met Esau it was an easy matter to get right with him. It is easy to get right with our brother when once we are right with God.

5. Jacob's reconciliation with Esau (vv. 12-15). Jacob's reconciliation with Esau was a result of his wrestling with God. He was now a new man, a new creature, and he was now able to love his brother as himself.

At Saturday's session of the circuit court T. A. Dickson of Lake City entered a plea of guilty to a charge of embezzlement. Judge Wamsley gave him an indeterminate sentence of 1 to 15 years at the Southern Illinois Penitentiary.

Mr. Dickson was taken to the penitentiary Sunday by Sheriff Lansden and Pearl Loy. Both of the officers were accompanied by their wives.

Mr. Dickson, who is past 61 years of age, was formerly a Lake City merchant. For many years he was treasurer of a school township, partly in Moultrie and partly in Macon counties.

During all of these years no treasurer's report was published in newspapers as the law requires. The taxpayers did not have any opportunity of knowing just what funds their treasurer handled.

The situation finally became suspicious and after the election of a new school trustee, a new treasurer was named. It was then found that the funds of Mr. Dickson were $14,463.36 short. The money had been taken over a period of years. His bondsmen are responsible to the district for this shortage, and suit for settlement is now pending in court. —Sullivan (Ill.) TIN KEEPS THINGS PURE

SHOULD you chance to be awake between four and five o'clock one of these spring mornings and take a peep out of your window, you may happen upon an interesting sight. In the dim light of dawn you will probably see making its way slowly down your street, either a motor wagon or a horse-drawn vehicle which is the center of much interesting activity.

If the wagon is horse-drawn its propelling power acts without human direction. From a distance you will observe the horse linger before one house and then plug sturdily past two or three others. Sometimes he varies the monotony by resting a hoof on the curb and peering expectantly up and down the street in the vain hope that some early rising passer-by may be induced by this maneuver to give his cool nose the rubbing he would so obviously like.

A Busy Man

Whether the wagon is horse or motor-drawn, its driver is a busy man—back and forth he larts bearing his burden of shining bottles into doorways and areaways, flashing his electric torch on house numbers and illuminating with its revealing glow dark passages and treacherous staircases lest he stumble with his precious load. This is the morning milk delivered to your door, pure and fresh for the family's use.

Probably, Mrs. Housewife, as look at the gleaming bottles on your kitchen table, you picture the milk traveling the fifty to one hundred miles from the dairy to your home in its present glass container. If you do, you are much mistaken, for the receptacle in which the milk was whisked through the night was not of glass but of tin—yes tin, just like the tin in which were packed the delicious peas which you had for dinner last evening, the shrimp which you have purchased for luncheon today and the slices of golden apricots which will ornament the birthday cake for Annette's party this afternoon.

Tin Does the Trick

If one had to decide what individual agency had most to do with preserving the purity of the milk which is the chief nutriment of sturdy little children and so important an article of adult diet, the conclusion would inevitably be—tin.

Beginning with the sanitary barns in which the cows are kept—tin or galvanized iron ventilators admit the current of fresh purifying air upon which the Board of Health is so insistent.

In preparation for milking in the best dairies, the cows are cleaned and brushed. Then enter the milkers in their white uniforms and the milk is drawn into pails of block tin and transferred to tin containers to cool. These containers, the pails and the strainers as well are scrupulously cleaned and sterilized each time they are used.

The great ten-gallon containers are next taken by trucks and put on the trains. If the distance to go is short the tins, packed in ice, travel by freight, if long, refrigerator cars are used. Instead of tin containers, insulated tanks of steel, copper or tinned copper, glass-lined, are sometimes employed.

In the City

In the city the milk is poured into large tanks and pumped to the top floor of the plant, or conveyed there in the original containers. It is run through the clarifier which removes all visible dirt, pasteurized, and run into a cooler. When cold, it is transferred to the filling machine and then into the bottles which are delivered at your door.

The safe and sanitary cleanliness of tin is emphasized by the following quotation from "The Principles and Practice of Milk Hygiene," by Louis A. Klein—"All surfaces with which the milk comes in contact should be covered with tin."

In caring for the tin receptacles the same method as that adopted by the great canneries is observed—rinsing with cold water, then washing with soapy water, then rinsing and sterilization by live steam. In this way the milk arrives at its destination as pure and uncontaminated as do the delicious peaches of California, or the luscious slices of ripe Hawaiian pineapple that travel countless miles over sea and land safe from all the elements of deterioration in their sealed containers of hygienic tin.*

Milk Association Price Cut News

Milk in Chicago will now sell for 11 cents a quart as the result of arbitration between the dealers and the producers organization. The farmer price, however, remains the same.

When the possibility of a cut in the May price to farmers became apparent, Pure Milk Association directors held a number of meetings in their districts and found that the feeling among the membership was that a cut in price would wreck them financially. The Pure Milk Association, therefore, refused to accept the 25 cent reduction (per 100 lbs.) suggested by the dealers early in May and no settlement could be reached. Following several days of conference, Dr. Clyde L. King of the University of Pennsylvania was called to Chicago to arbitrate and what ever was his decision both groups agreed to accept.

After two days of arbitration Dr. King announced Saturday evening the following: "The price of milk in Chicago will go to 11 cents for quarts on May 10. This passes on to the consumer under present farm prices more than the dealers save under the recent wage agreement. I have grave doubts whether the dealers can live under the small margin left them. Market factors must also be considered. I have, therefore, taken the price of milk to the farmers under advisement, pending the effect on the market of such a change in the price of quarts."

The present retail price of quarts now divides the consumer's eleven pennies in the following manner: 4.47 to labor, 4.29 to farmers and 2.24 to distributors. Had the originally proposed 25 cent reduction to the farmer been made, over 18,000 farmers in the Chicago trading area would have had their incomes reduced $15,000 daily. It is possible, however, that after Dr. King goes into the marketing costs more thoroughly he will find that the dealers actually cannot make ends meet under the new conditions. In that event, the producers costs will be further analyzed and a decision rendered by Dr. King.

The reduction to the consumer is

CURBING MOTOR TRUCK CARRIERS

From Massachusetts to California and from Texas to the Great Lakes an insistent clamor is arising for legislation restricting motortruck operators. This is not a pro-railroad campaign, although the railroads enjoy the sympathy of many persons. But rather it is a complaint against what some consider a usurpation of the public highway.

The consensus of analysis is that the highway carrier is not yet contributing his entire share toward the upkeep of the roads which he uses. In fact statistics appear to justify the conclusion that two-thirds of the rural highway costs are borne by the general taxpayers, if credence may be placed in an article by a consulting engineer, Mr. S. S. Wyer, in the official organ of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. In 1923 he ascertained that the United States spent approximately $860,000,000 on roads; in 1930 this sum was almost tripled. Less than half this cost is met by existing taxes, so that the rest must come out of bonds.

But here the problem becomes acute, for with the severe use to which busy roads are put, augmented by the devastating pounding of the motortrucks over them, the highway wear out before the bonds issued to build them have matured, so that subsequent forms of borrowing are necessary, with the result that a road may be piling up interest charges far beyond the capacity of the motor traffic to pay. There is an accumulating deficit to be passed on to a subsequent generation of taxpayers, for an accounting, sooner or later, must be made by the state, county or municipality directly affected.

This is the taxpayer's phase of the question. From another point of view the railroads are not seriously concerned with the motorbus, since the bulk of their passenger traffic has been lost to the private automobile, rather than the bus. With the truck, however the situation is becoming serious. As noted by Mr. George Ogden, New England vice-president of the Pennsylvania railroad, in a recent address, the slight degree of state regulation employed "is more theoretical than real, and in any event applies only to interstate traffic." The trucks may make discriminatory rates, may change them from day to day; may accept what business they desire and refuse the remainder; and are subject to no regulations as to wages or hours of employment for their men.

But the railroads' plaint perhaps would get relatively little attention from the public were it not for the annoying experience of automobile drivers who find the highways congested with broad lumbering trucks often hauling trailers, which impede travel pile up a string of waiting cars behind them, and leave only a narrow lane if any for passing.

Now comes the Interstate Commerce Commission with a definite recommendation that federal regulation of interstate passenger buses and federal licensing of interstate motor truck carriers be established by law, and that the commission be empowered to administer such regulations. The continued interest of Congress in the subject gives rise to the hope that after these several years' consideration a motor carrier bill will be enacted which will afford not only some relief to the highways, but also some protection to the railroads.

"There's a Death Message for This Man,"

we must catch him when he comes through here"

His mother had died suddenly. His family was perplexed about notifying him, for he was "somewhere on the way to California." Just where, nobody knew.

They did know, however, he was motoring over a route selected by the Conoco Travel Bureau. So the death message was wired to Albuquerque, New Mexico, which was on that route.

The Continental office set every Conoco station attendant in Albuquerque looking for the traveler. All day Conoco men asked motorists their names. And finally the right man was found, the message delivered to him. An unusual incident. Just one of many out-of-the-ordinary happenings, however, that have earned a Nation-wide reputation for the Conoco Travel Bureau and its services.

We do more than furnish road maps, help choose routes and supply other travel information. We look upon every Conoco Passport holder as a personal friend to be served in every way possible. Every Conoco station is a branch of the Conoco Travel Bureau, and every Conoco attendant is the traveler's well-informed friend.

If you are planning a motor trip, write us where and when you want to go. Or fill in convenient application at any Conoco station. We will send you a Conoco Passport, 1932 road maps and other travel information. Our service is absolutely free... maintained for the benefit of American motorists by Continental.

SUCH IS LIFE—Just as Good!

HOARDERS HEAP BUM
BILLS ON TREASURYCalled Upon to Redeem
Mutilated Currency.

Washington.—The amount of burned, rotted and mutilated money arriving at the treasury for redemption has vaulted to its highest level since World war days.

Treasury officials attribute the increased receipts of mutilated currency to the widespread and unusual hoarding activities which followed last year's record number of bank failures, says the Chicago Tribune.

Beginning shortly after the bank failure rate reached a high peak last year, the amount of burned, rotted and mutilated currency reaching the treasury has increased monthly until today employees in the currency redemption department are forced to work overtime to take care of hoarded currency which came to grief.

Failure of hoarders to remember that their life savings had been placed in the stove for safe-keeping until a fire had been built has proved responsible for much of the money reaching Washington. In many cases money has been hoarded in chimneys to the great detriment of the currency when fall fires were built. In other in-in banks he believed to be insecure. The extremely delicate work of making good this mutilated money is done by several women clerks of long experience, whose word as to the authenticity of the claim is virtually infallible.

The task of ascertaining the validity of the ashes or pulp which is sent in by hoarders as the remains of good money is particularly exacting in the national bank redemption agency, which redeems national and federal reserve bank notes. In this bureau not only must the remains be identified as genuine currency before it can be redeemed, but the expert must also ascertain the member bank which issued it.

In the redemption division of the treasury's office, where notes of United States issue are redeemed, only the fact that the remains are those of real money is necessary for redemption to be made. In both bureaus, of course, the experts must find out the exact denominations of the destroyed notes.

The records of the claims handled by the experts read almost like fiction and most of their work seems all but incredible to the layman.

Here is a case in point:
Not long ago a citizen of Ohio ap-

MAKING MINUTES COUNT

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I have just been talking with Gordon concerning the qualities of an intimate acquaintance of ours who has made the most outstanding success of the work he has undertaken of any man in his line with whom I am familiar. We were trying, if possible, to analyze the personal qualities in him which made this success possible.

"I used to think," Gordon said to me, "that it was Corson's keen intellect, the unusual character of his mind which brought him success, and I must admit he has these, but as I have come more and more closely into contact with him I believe it is his ability to utilize every minute of time in some effective way which has been his greatest asset."

"We have marveled sometimes at the amount and the variety of work which he turns out. I have been at his house a good deal and it is no marvel to me now. You never see him sitting with his hands in his lap, smoking or doing nothing. He is reading the latest new book, or writing, or making something. No wonder he gets a lot of work done."

I got a good lesson from Martin when I was a young fellow. Martin never wasted time. He lived in a suburban town and had to take an early train into the city. He always ate with his watch on the table beside him—not hastily but deliberately. He gave himself three minutes to get to the station a block away. He always walked along leisurely and without the agitation which so often induces indigestion. It was the way he managed his business affairs—he utilized every minute.

There are few things which a large percentage of the young people with whom I am acquainted have learned more thoroughly than how to waste time, and if a man wants to accomplish much in the world he must make the minutes count.

BABY
RESTLESS?

Look to this cause

When your baby fusses, tosses and seems unable to sleep restfully, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation. To get rid quickly of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Castoria, you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a young infant to relieve colic. Yet it is as effective for older children. Castoria's regulative help will bring relaxed comfort and restful sleep to your baby. Keep a bottle on hand. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

Home Sweet Home in Japan

Bamboo, paper, and tile—all help to create this little village. The walls may be leaning "seven ways for Sunday," but nothing matters as long as the roof doesn't leak.

stances money became damaged after being placed in mattresses or other places for safe-keeping.

Hoarding which results in currency mutilation causes losses for the government and in some cases to the individual. About 75 per cent of the mutilated money is redeemed. The government loses because of the expense of financing a division for the purpose of redeeming money.

In recent months, it was stated at the treasury, practically every claim in mutilated currency cases has been accompanied by a statement from the owner of the money telling how he hid his savings in some place he thought secure rather than deposit it peared at the national bank redemption agency with a box securely bound with adhesive tape, in which he said there reposed the remains of $700. He had drawn the money from the bank, he said, put it in a baking powder can which he put in a still larger metal can, and had hidden it in the soot at the base of a chimney. A fire in an upstairs fireplace caused the soot to get hot and the cans and the $700 were reduced to a mass of metal and ashes. This mass he wanted redeemed for real money.

The sympathetic superintendent of the agency turned the case over to the experts and by noon next day they had identified not $700 but $710, and had authorized payment of the money in full. Whereupon the citizen of Ohio admitted he had expected to retrieve only about half his $700.

In order to make this restitution the experts were faced with the problem of ascertaining, from hardly more than a handful of ashes, first whether the ashes were those of genuine currency; second, the exact denomination of each note; and third, which of some ten thousand member banks had issued the notes.

BUILD WATER TUNNEL
FAR UNDER NEW YORK

Job Costing $43,000,000 Is Nearly Finished.

New York.—Some 500 feet beneath the point where Steinway avenue in Queens runs into the East river, at the foot of what is known as shaft 9A, drillers are now putting the finishing touches to their three years' task of excavating the 19 shafts and 20 miles of city tunnel No. 2, the $43,000,000 water conduit being built by the board of water supply. The last section of rock in the tunnel itself, between shafts 2A and 3A under the Bronx river, was "holed through" recently. All that remains of the excavating phase of the work is to round out the system of access tunnels and pumping chambers designed to permit drainage of the entire aqueduct from shaft 9A.

Since March, 1929, gangs of men have been working 24 hours a day, six days a week, slowly linking up from Hill View reservoir in Yonkers to Red Hook in Brooklyn this rock tunnel, longer than any yet constructed by man. More than 1,300,000 drill holes have been "shot" with approximately 7,000,000 pounds of dynamite to dislodge the 1,500,000 cubic yards of rocks that have been removed.

Large enough to hold a subway car with a man standing on top of it, and as long as the run from Van Courtlandt park to Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn—in some places as far beneath the sidewalk as the Metropolitan tower is above it, and in no place less than 520 feet under ground—this mammoth pressure tunnel is destined to supply Brooklyn, Queens and a part of the Bronx with 700,000,000 gallons of water a day. With this flow and that from existing aqueducts, it is estimated the city will be able to meet its requirements as to delivery of water until 1950.

Engineers of the board of water supply report that the tunnel is 90 per cent completed, with the contractor, Patrick McGovern, Inc., working about one year in advance of his schedule. They plan to open the gates to the downtown shaft at the southern end of Hill View reservoir and fill the tunnel with water early in 1933.

South Bend, Ind.—Everett Leek, sixty-four, died after drinking tree spray to find out what it was. Teek met Steve Solnoky, the caretaker, at the J. M. He died as he reached the hospital.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Illinois Press Association

Probate court files on the estate of Mary Todd Lincoln has been removed from the court archives by Judge Benjamin S. DeBoice and transferred for permanent keeping in the state historical library, where they have been placed with other Lincoln records. Photostatic copies were left on record in Probate court.

Arrangements are now being formulated for the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held in Springfield, September 18-23.

A contract for repairs on the dome of the state capitol building has been awarded to W. M. Allen Son and company of Peoria, according to a report from the office of Secretary of State William J. Stratton. Roofs on both the north and south wings of the building are leaking and considerable work is necessary on them as well. The dome will be covered with zinc. Specifications, which were prepared by State Architect H. Herrick Hammon's office, provide the work must be completed by September 1.

The Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will hold its thirty-seventh annual convention in Chicago from May 17 to May 20. Among the subjects to be considered by the delegates, from the viewpoint of women's clubs in general and the federation in particular, are community service, law observance, forestry conservation, international relations, education, legislation, public welfare, motion pictures, public health and child hygiene, American citizenship and the George Washington bicentennial program.

Co-operation of the citizens of Illinois in the observance of National Music week, May 1 to 7, has been urged in a statement issued to the press by Gov. Louis L. Emmerson. He recalled that 25 of the 48 states of the nation participated in National Music week activities last year and suggested that the occasion this year be observed by mass concerts, musical programs in the schools, churches, clubs, theaters and in the homes of citizens. National Music week is sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

The Illinois Chamber of Commerce is urging every city in the state to take advantage of whatever scenic or historical points that are near them by giving specific information about them to be given motorists who pass through their town. This organization points out that there are hundreds of places of tourist interest in the state which are unknown to all but a very few local residents, and that in this year of curtailed budgets, many Illinois car owners will be looking for scenery and history closer to home. The Chamber of Commerce feels that Illinois cities will find the process of "rediscovering themselves" both profitable and interesting.

Wayne Hummer of LaSalle, chairman of the state planning commission recently set up by the legislature, has announced the appointment of C. L. Hardin as secretary of the commission. Hummer also has announced that a report prepared by Jacob Crane, engineer, on state planning possibilities will be published soon. The commission was organized to co-ordinate all present and future development of state resources for the benefit of the state as a whole.

Two gavels to be added to the Illinois State Historical society's collection of Lincolniana and Illinois relics, were presented by members of the Illinois Press association to Paul Angle, secretary of the Historical society recently. A third gavel was presented by Sheldon W. Snively of Terre Haute, Ind., son of Ethan Allan Snively, former Illinois journalist and past president of the Illinois Press association. Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling and S. P. Preston, editor of the Gillespie News, presented the association's gavels to the society. H. L. Williamson, secretary of the Illinois Press association, presided. The gavel presented by Mr. Snively dates back to 1877 and is made from wood from Lincoln's home in Springfield. The gavel formerly belonged to Mr. Snively's father.

W. D. Hardy, former assistant director of finance for Illinois under Gov. Len Small, died at Taylorville, his home, on April 25. Paralysis caused his death.

October 6 and 7 were the dates selected for the annual convention of the Illinois Municipal league at a recent meeting of the executive committee of that organization recently. Although the choice for the convention city has not been made, Rockford and Peoria are the two places being most strongly considered.

Tiny State

The extreme length of the state of Rhode Island from north to south is 48 miles and the extreme width from east to west is 36 miles. The area is 1,248 square miles, of which 1,067 square miles are land surface.

Final settlement on the bill to extend the tax penalty date for 1930 Cook county taxes was made during the second week of the legislature's special session. The bill, as approved by both houses, sets the penalty rate as June 1 and is awaiting the governor's signature. A further step to aid in the relief of Cook county was taken in the senate with the passing of six bills, one to strengthen the personal property law and the others to help along the assessment of personal property in Cook county. These have been sent to the house for consideration. Other Cook county tax bills are still pending in the senate.

The bill to appropriate another $20,000,000 for unemployment relief in Illinois has been defeated by the senate. The legislature has already appropriated $20,000,000 for relief of the jobless which will last until the latter part of August, it is estimated.

Acting Gov. Fred E. Sterling has signed House Bill No. 15, which places securities, brokers and agents under the supervision of the state securities department of the office of Secretary of State Stratton. The law compels those who would deal in securities to obtain a license from the state, and replaces a section in the securities act which was held invalid by the State Supreme court. Enactment of the bill, it was said, will rid Illinois of a large number of unscrupulous securities dealers and save thousands of investors millions of dollars annually.

Stockholders and former stockholders in state banks are each liable to the amount of the par value of their stock for all money deposited while they were stockholders, if the money has not since been withdrawn, the Illinois State Supreme court has ruled in affirming a decision of the Marion County Circuit court.

The first 1 per cent penalty on unpaid taxes was imposed on May 1 by tax collectors throughout the state. Similar penalties will be added the first of each following month. Both personal and real property come under the penalties clause, according to authorities.

Proposals for $2,571,100.42 worth of state highway and bridge construction, which have been opened by state highway engineers, call for $6.68 miles of paving, 50.03 miles of grading and for 16 bridge sections, scattered from Union county northward to the Wisconsin line. This letting together with contracts carried over from 1931, awarded since January 1, and now under construction, signifies early action on a total of 640 miles of paving, 174 miles of grading, 134 bridge sections and some 15 highway and grade separation projects.

Farm work in Illinois has made favorable progress since April 1, with soil in good condition for working, A. J. Surratt, state agricultural statistician, has reported. This has offset the delay due to the March freeze-up and the advancement of farm work is now up to average, although plant growth is backward as April weather has been mostly cool and dry.

The Two Hundred and Second coast artillery of the Illinois National Guard will train this year with artillery units of several other states at Fort Barrancas, Fla. Adj. Gen. Carlos E. Black has announced. The training period will be July 31 to August 13. The National Guard encampment will be held at Camp Grant from August 6 to 20.

A Chicago pastor, Dr. Preston Bradley of the non-denominational People's church, was re-elected president of the Izaak Walton League of America at its tenth annual convention held recently in Chicago.

The United States War department has approved plans of the Illinois department of public works for a bridge across the Illinois river near Seneca.

Blossom time in southern Illinois is attracting thousands of motorists from other parts of the state, despite the fact that many of the peach blooms are missing, having been killed by the March freeze.

Illinois high school championships in track, golf and tennis will be decided at the University of Illinois on May 20 and 21, it has been announced.

Guy L. Bush, Downers Grove, for twelve years a member of the Illinois house of representatives, died in Chicago on April 25 following an illness of ten weeks. Mr. Bush served in the legislature from 1898 until 1910. Later he was a national and state bank examiner.

DEVIL JUDD TOLLIVER

"DEVIL," John Fox, Jr., called him in "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "Devil" Judd Tolliver, but all up and down the borderland of Kentucky, from the Big Sandy to the Cumberland and far into the Blue Ridge mountains of Virginia he was known as "Bad." "Bad" John Wright, straight-shooting son of the hills, a bad man to pick a quarrel with. If you doubted that the lanky old man who died just a few years ago at the age of ninety had earned that ominous title, you had only to look at the thirty odd notches on his gun, or at "Wright's cemetery," a little plot so called because "Bad" John had filled more graves in it than any other cause.

It is only fair to give credence to Wright's claim that all of his killings were in the cause of law and order, or at least under circumstances under which, somebody being bound to be killed, justice was with the keenest eye and the straightest aim. But fighting was his second nature. During the Civil war he served first as scout for Morgan's Raiders on the Confederate side, was captured and imprisoned at old Fort Smith and on his release joined up with the Union army and fought with it through to the end of the war. He was quite a family man, too, several times a husband and father of over thirty children whom he kept track of in his own mind by the ingenious device of associating them with their mother's maiden name. Alice Wright, the original of June of the novel, for instance, was a Harmon. When John Fox, Jr., knew Wright, he owned 3,000 acres of land in Lonesome cove. All except the burial ground which held his ancestors back to the days of Daniel Boone Wright later sold out for a ridiculously low price to a coal company.

THE TEDDY BEAR

THE Teddy Bear, essential to every nursery twenty years ago and still a popular toy, was of course named for Teddy Roosevelt, but how a President of the United States became associated with a humble little stuffed bear is just another proof of the so-called "power of the press."

About 1888 in a little village in Germany a crippled dressmaker named Margarete Steiff concocted out of left-over scraps of material a little stuffed bear which she presented to a child of the neighborhood. The bear proved so popular that her brother, Richard Steiff, with an eye to business, had other bears manufactured and put on the market. The first stuffed bears sold in this country were imported in 1902 by Borgfeldt & Co.

That same fall President Roosevelt went hunting in Mississippi. Soon the ever watchful press informed the country that its President had refused to shoot a small bear which had been captured and brought into camp for him to kill. Clifford E. Berryman, cartoonist, proceeded to make the incident subject for a cartoon in which Roosevelt, gun in one hand and the other raised traffic cop fashion as if to prevent such a deed, stood with his back turned to another man leading a tiny bear on a rope. Labeled "Drawing the Line in Mississippi," the cartoon took the country by storm. Berryman subsequently adopted the bear as mascot for all of his Roosevelt cartoons and Margarete Steiff's "stuffed bear" was soon being sold as Teddy's or the Teddy bear.

SAM PATCH

IF THE name of Sam Patch became, several generations ago, a synonym for boasting, cocksure foolhardiness, it was not so much because of what he did as because of the way he did it.

Sam was a brave "stunt" jumper to be sure. From leaping boldly off bridges into the stream below and from the tops of windmills, he advanced in his art to such a point that he leaped successfully from a shelf of rock midway between the highest point on Goat island and the water at Niagara falls. Meantime, of course, he also advanced in fame and fortune, from a humble cotton spinner in Pawtucket, R. I., in which place he was born in 1807, to a public figure, drawing down good compensation and followed by admiring throngs wherever he went.

Sam waxed in confidence and ambition. At length, in November, 1829, he faced an excited audience gathered to see him leap the Genessee falls on the Genessee river near Rochester, N. Y., and said: "Napoleon was a great man and a great general. He conquered armies and nations, but couldn't jump the falls of the Genessee. That was left for me to do, and do it I will." And Sam Patch leaped, to his own death, proving that even famous "stunt" jumpers sometimes must meet their Waterloo.

BULGARIANS LIVE CLOSE TO NATURE

Primitive Simplicity in the Mountain Ranges.

In the midst of Bulgaria's numerous mountain chains, a large number of villages are picturesquely tucked away in their folds, and dotted here and there on their undulating slopes. There is a striking difference between the character and psychology of the peasants living in these mountainous regions and those who dwell on the plains near towns. Their mode of life is at complete variance; the soil is usually of a poorer quality, their holdings are smaller, and their culture is on a lower plane.

Through centuries of hard toil, under most adverse conditions, their material wants are most modest. In many ways they are almost self-supporting. Their daily food consists mainly of black bread, milk and cheese of their own production, while the wild fruits of the mountains, such as strawberries, blackberries, etc., help to relieve this monotonous menu.

Their clothing is homespun. It is made of coarse but most durable material, the wool being taken from their own sheep, and worked up into cloth by the women folk. Generally speaking they are not tillers of the soil in the real sense of the word, as they possess but scraggy patches of fertile soil which the women folk mainly cultivate for the personal needs of the family. The men folk and the small boys are in many cases shepherds and spend long periods roaming over the mountain valleys tending their flocks, away from every sound of civilization. These shepherds are always accompanied by their true and faithful friends, the sheep dogs who guard them and their flocks day and night, especially from wolves and other beasts of the forests which cover large sections of the Bulgarian mountains. The shepherds love their dogs as their children and the care given to their dumb friends is touching.

But while their bodies have not indulged in material luxuries, their minds and their soul have for centuries been alive to the wonders and beauties of God's earth. Biggest Concrete Bridge

The Plougastel bridge in Scotland is said to be the largest concrete structure of its kind in the world. In the foundations, the piers and the arch springings where the concrete is in contact with sea water aluminum cement is used, but for the immense arches which are out of reach of sea water attack portland cement is used. As sulphates are frequently met with in the ground aluminum cement permits the use of concrete for foundations with safety.

Early Colonial Coins

The earliest coins struck in the United States were the New England shilling, six-pence, and three-pence, issued in the colony of Massachusetts about 1652.

WHY DID A BABY STARVE ON THIS?

WHY DID THE SAME BABY THRIVE ON THIS?

Food elements

in both were the same

CHEMICALLY, two baby foods can be exactly alike. The same percentage of carbohydrate, fat, protein, mineral salts. The same vitamins.

Yet on one, a baby may lose weight, grow thin and weak. And on the other, that same baby can flourish and gain and take on new life. What's the reason?...

Digestibility.

Digestibility of prime importance!

Doctors know that a baby can starve on what is apparently the most perfectly "balanced" formula if his body cannot use the food elements it contains. Only a food which is easily and completely digested and assimilated can give to your baby the full amount of building material his little body needs.

Countless doctors and mothers have found this out through actual experience. And that is why Eagle Brand, over a period of 75 years, has won a marvelous reputation as an infant food. For Eagle Brand, next to mother's milk, is the easiest form of milk in all the world to digest. In baby's stomach, Eagle Brand forms soft, fine curds, like those formed by mother's milk. Every drop of Eagle Brand is quickly assimilated, goes quickly into the making of bones and teeth, muscle and tissue, energy and strength.

This milk can build 100% babies!

And what a builder Eagle Brand is! Recently, in a world-famous baby clinic, two physicians—specialists in their field —fed a group of 50 average babies on Eagle Brand for several months, to test its exact value in baby building. Bone structure was studied with the X-ray. Tooth development was watched. Weight and height were periodically recorded. Blood tests were made . . . and those 50 Eagle Brand babies, judged by every known test, proved themselves splendidly nourished.

This simple diet—Eagle Brand with the usual supplementary foods*—had proved equal in every way to the building of 100% babies.

What overwhelming proof that the mother whose own milk fails can put her baby on Eagle Brand with perfect confidence!

Try Eagle Brand. See the simple instructions on the label. And send for the new booklet "Baby's Welfare." It gives feeding schedules, full directions for baby's care, together with pictures and life stories of Eagle Brand babies.

*The usual supplementary foods, of course, are orange or tomato juice, and cod-liver oil or other source of the anti-rachitic vitamin D.

Editors Guests of

Major Parker

Last Friday night 125 editors of suburban and community papers in the Chicago area were guests of Major Parker of the United States Army at a banquet at the Press Club of Chicago. Not being able to present himself, Major Parker sent Colonel Wolrick and Colonel Johnston who proved very able and interesting substitutes. Both gave a fine outline of the great military tournament to be held each night from June 24th to July 4th in Soldiers Field, Chicago. This great affair is to be staged for the purpose of arousing a spirit of patriotism so much needed right now. Watch for more details about this event.

After the banquet the community and suburban publishers discussed the matter of perfecting their organizations as divisions of the Chicago Press Club. Another meeting will be held on the third Friday evening in June. Will County was represented by Wm. Semmler, editor of the News-Bulletin and by two representatives from the Spectator of Joliet.

TINLEY PARK PREPARING FOR POPPY DAY

In the Spring of 1919 after the war on Flanders Field, where the firing had been terrific and thousands of soldiers had fallen in battle, in the midst of complete devastation, the poppies came up in abundance. The French women tell you today that the poppy is significant of the sacrificial blood of the boys who fell on Flanders Fields. Those who have traveled thru France since the war, tell us it is peculiarly true, where the battle was the fiercest and bloodshed the greatest, the poppies to this day grow most profuse.

Because of this close association to the supreme sacrifice made by the boys who fell in France, the poppy has become the Memorial Flower of The American Legion and Auxiliary—the emblem of a faith that is being kept thru service to the living.

Each American Legion Post pays five cents per poppy. One cent is given to the men in hospitals who are not getting government compensation, for making the flowers.

Tinley Park Post will keep all the money made by the sale of the poppies May 26th to help all disabled veterans and their families in this town.

BEAUTIFY NEW LENOX SCHOOL GROUNDS WITH BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS

Friday after school May 13th, the school children and teachers planted flowers on the grounds at the New Lenox school. Two ponies and wagons were used to haul rich dirt and materials which were needed. Although only four small plots were planted, and in view of the lateness of the undertaking, some flowers are expected. The planting consisted of dahlias, cannas, lilies, asters, zinnias, and a few other flowers.

Children and parents responded well by contributing seeds and bulbs. The janitor has made small wooden fences around the plots to guard them. We hope this little event will give inspiration to our town so that the people will, at some more opportune time, continue beautifying the school grounds.

The same teachers have been re-engaged for next school term namely: Valeria LaMore, primary; Ina MacFarlane, intermediate; Kenneth Rose, upper grades.

School ends June 3rd. Upon that day we are expecting a school picnic. Definite plans have not been worked out, but it has been agreed that it should be held at Noel park in Joliet, if transportation can be gained, but if proper transportation cannot be found, we shall have to celebrate our closing at a less interesting site at the edge of our town of New Lenox. We feel assured when the time is ripe for this picnic that there will be adequate transportation facilities.

The mothers are planning this picnic which not only relieves the teachers of added work, but which shows a good spirit of co-operation.

FRANKFORT

Mr. A. F. Hill, Miss Viola Lanekau and Miss Nellie Brandt have been re-engaged as teachers of the Frankfort public school for next year. Their salaries remain the same.

Orland Frigidaire Dealer Shows Very Interesting Exhibit

The newest and latest household electric refrigerators built by Frigidaire Corporation are being featured this month throughout the United States by dealers of this organization, who are conducting their annual Spring Showing.

Clarence E. Beagley, Orland Park dealer is tying in with the national demonstration and is exhibiting as a part of his special May display a food thrift exhibit, which dramatizes in a most effective manner the large savings which Frigidaire users have been able to effect thru the economies this electric refrigerator makes possible.

Mr. Beagley says "a survey made some time ago among Frigidaire users showed that their average savings was $9.96 a month", he said. "At the present price of foodstuffs, such a sum will buy a surprising amount of provisions. There is no doubt but that the cost of living has come down."

"Today, as a result a Frigidaire with all the known value it represents can be had at the lowest price in the history of the company. And best of all, this electric refrigerator will actually pay for itself out of the savings it makes possible"

Seeks To Void O'Neill Nomination

Politics in Will County have been greatly stirred up the past week as the result of attorney Joseph Kieg of Lockport who was defeated in his race for the office of representative on the Republican ticket in the April primary, starting legal proceedings this week to have Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill removed as the successful nominee for the office mentioned on the ground that two years ago she ran as an independent and therefore could not run as a Republican this year. All the candidates for the office of representative on the Republican ticket have been made defendants by these proceedings and were called into court at Joliet on Thursday and Friday. Attorney A. H. Krusemark is representing Mrs. O'Neill and attorney Wm. Heise is consul for John Walker. The outcome of these proceedings are being watched with keen interest.
